

LET'S SHINE BRIGHTER!

Undergraduate women attending the following Forté Rising Star sponsor schools—or who received a special invitation via event participation—are invited to join this new initiative: Carnegie Mellon University, Cornell University, The George Washington University, Indiana University, New York University, The Ohio State University, University of Michigan, The University of Texas at Austin, William & Mary, and Yale University.

Forté's Rising Star designation benefits all majors—and earning it demonstrates your career readiness to top employers. Candidates master a five-part curriculum at their convenience—throughout college or in one year—focused on career exploration, event participation, job searching, networking, and MBA exploration. Your candidacy begins once you "join" and start earning the 500 points needed to add Forté Rising Star to your resume.

YOUR STAR POWER

Stand out to top employers

Rock your Rising Star status by adding your candidacy—as well as the designation, once earned! —to your resume.

Earn rewards as you master curriculum milestones

Receive rewards that help you shine in resume books, interview preparation, mentoring relationships, and more each time you score 100 points.

Learn about your many career possibilities, including job paths and MBA programs

Explore cool careers, MBA benefits and requirements, and women's leadership events and webinars as you complete our curriculum.

Build productive relationships with business leaders, MBA students, and career counselors

Connect with career influencers—and serve in student and community leadership positions—as you master our networking curriculum.

Jump start your job search—and earn points

Polish and post your resume, create and enhance your LinkedIn profile, and leverage Forté's job resources as you rise to stardom (with Forté and prospective employers).

DON'T SEE YOUR SCHOOL? CHECK BACK NEXT YEAR!

We're piloting the initiative on 10 campuses, but may expand next school year. Meanwhile, all college students can become general Forté members (details follow).
